

Shay Salomon "Little House on a Small Planet"

p.184 Every great work of art shows this principle: if something is unnecessary to a composition, it weakens the composition. Tas pats su tavim ir tavo gyvenimu... Nesinešioti apsikrovus nereikalingais dalykais.

p.205 If you don't have space in your head, you crave more physical space.

p.216 The modern home which has neither basement nor attic is a prescription for divorce. Men used to have a workshop to escape to, but now there's nowhere to go.

p.251 You might be freer without something than with it.
